Data Security and Accuracy

- Ramesh V Bhupalam

We have witnessed a series of scandals involving some of the big names in the business in the recent past. This phenomenon is not new to the business world, be it with the developed world or India. One thing that is common in all these has been the falsification of data. The perpetrators have leveraged the existing technology in all these cases. All these leads us to one big question "How secure and accurate is our data?"

Every business runs or rather revolves around its data bank. This data bank can be as trivial as a phone book register or the financial books. There should be certain checks and balances to maintain data security.

Some of the key points any business establishment can follow to maintain the accuracy and security of their data are

- Good pc's/systems
- Dedicated servers
- Strong access control to systems / servers
- Good password policy
- Daily Data backup of Application data
- Randomly Verifying backups taken
- Daily summary reports of the transactions done
- Random stock checking
- Random price list checking

The above key points may look trivial to the discerning eye, but it goes a long way in ensuring the safety and accuracy of your data. Every business suffers when there is loss of data or blockage of data even for a short span of time. The implications may be enormous when the data loss is acute.

Any business establishment which religiously implements the above key points with start to reap the benefits immediately and continue to do so for many years in the future also.

Thought For The Day

One day a farmer's donkey fell down into a well. The animal cried piteously for hours as the farmer tried to figure out what to do. Finally, he decided the animal was old, and the well needed to be covered up anyway; it just wasn't worth it to retrieve the donkey.

He invited all his neighbors to come over and help him. They all grabbed a shovel and began to shovel dirt into the well.

At first, the donkey realized what was happening and cried horribly. Then, to everyone's amazement he quieted down.

A few shovel loads later, the farmer finally looked down the well. He was astonished at what he saw. With each shovel of dirt that hit his back, the donkey was doing something amazing. He would shake it off and take a step up.

As the farmer's neighbors continued to shovel dirt on top of the animal, he would shake it off and take a step up. Pretty soon, everyone was amazed as the donkey stepped up over the edge of the well and happily trotted off!

Moral

Life is going to shovel dirt on you, all kinds of dirt. The trick to getting out of the well is to shake it off and take a step up. Each of our troubles is a stepping-stone. We can get out of the deepest wells just by not stopping, never giving up! Shake it off and take a step up.
