Goods & Service Tax

GST stands for Goods and Service Tax. Though our FM has suggested GST to be introduced in India from 1st April 2010, there is no any white paper released from government on this yet. GST would be basically of 2 Major types first one is Goods - all products manufactured / traded / sold and second one is Service - Any kind of services being treated as common in entire India.

Goods would attract 6% GST i.e. any item traded will be treated as goods and any kind of services like labour charges, consultancy charges, other services are to be covered under the 8% GST. State government gets the GST on goods and may be named as S-GST and service component goes to Central Government may be called as C-GST.

As we are a IT related company there is a major debate on software to be treated as service or product. So this implication ofsoftware to be on service grounds is still on hold as there are cases on software either to be termed as Goods or service by companies like Satyam, TCS, and Infosys in the Madras and Bangalore high court's.

All the indirect taxes except the Customs duty may come under C-GST. All other service taxes covered in electricity, water etc may come under C-GST which is absorbed by central government except the Stamp duty which is relevant to the respective State Government. As the usual practice all the Input tax either state / central is eligible for calculating payable tax. Here only question would be what about year ending for 31st March 2010 to be clarified as it will be having Service tax in case of C-GST and for Goods related it will be having VAT.

The GST may bring a lot of new concepts, challenges and ideas. The GST would also make the 60 odd years Central excise law and 50 odd years sales tax laws a little redundant and irrelevant when GST is in place. We were in similar situation when VAT was introduced in 2005, there was a major change in nature of business and calculation took place, let us foresee what the new changes of GST would bring in to our lives.
